

Treaty between the government of the United States of America and the government of the Kingdom of Thailand on mutual assistance in criminal matters.

Signed at Bangkok, March 19, 1986.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

The White House, April 22, 1988

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith the Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Kingdom of Thailand on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters, signed at Bangkok on March 19, 1986. I transmit also, for the information of the Senate, the report of the Department of State with respect to the Treaty.

The Treaty is one of a series of modern mutual legal assistance treaties being negotiated by the United States in order to counter more effectively criminal activities. The Treaty should be an effective tool to prosecute a wide variety of modern criminals including members of drug cartels, "white-collar criminals," and terrorists. The Treaty is self-executing and utilizes existing statutory authority.

The Treaty provides for a broad range of cooperation in criminal matters. Mutual assistance available under the Treaty includes: (1) taking testimony or statements of witnesses; (2) providing documents, records, and evidence; (3) serving documents; (4) executing requests for searches and seizures; (5) transferring persons in custody for testimonial purposes; (6) locating persons; (7) initiating proceedings upon request; and (8) assisting in forfeiture proceedings.

I recommend that the Senate give early and favorable consideration to the Treaty and give its advice and consent to ratification.

Ronald Reagan.

LETTER OF SUBMITTAL

Department of State, Washington, April 18, 1988.

The President,

White House.

The President: I have the honor to submit to you the Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Kingdom of Thailand on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters, signed at Bangkok on March 19, 1986. I recommend that the Treaty be transmitted to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

The Treaty covers mutual legal assistance in criminal matters. In recent years, similar bilateral treaties have entered into force with Italy, the Netherlands, Switzerland and Turkey; others have been concluded (but not yet entered into force) with the Bahamas, Belgium, Canada, Colombia, Mexico, Morocco, and the United Kingdom on behalf of the Cayman Islands. The Treaty contains many provisions similar to those in the other treaties as well as some innovations.

The Treaty will not require further implementing legislation and will utilize the existing authority of the Federal courts, particularly 28 U.S.C. 1782.

Article 1 provides for assistance in "investigations, prosecutions and other proceedings relating to criminal matters." The Treaty thereby provides for assistance at the investigative stage (such as grand jury proceedings), as well as after formal charges have been filed. Assistance under the Treaty will include: taking testimony or statements of persons; provision of documents, records and evidence; serving documents; executing requests for searches and seizures; transferring persons in custody for testimonial purposes; locating witnesses; and other forms of assistance. The article states that it is not intended to create rights in private parties either to secure assistance or to suppress or exclude evidence obtained under the Treaty. The article also defines military offenses and provides that the treaty does not apply to such offenses.

Article 2 specifies the limited bases under the Treaty in which assistance may be denied by the Requested State. These bases are when the request would prejudice the sovereignty, security, or other essential public interests of the Requested State may postpone execution of a request if its execution would interfere with an ongoing investigation or prosecution. This article also provides that, before the Central Authority of the Requested State refuses a request, it should try to determine whether there is a way to render the assistance, subject to specified terms and conditions. If the Requesting State accepts the assistance subject to limitations, it must comply with those limitations.

Article 3 provides for the establishment of a Central Authority, which shall be the Attorney General or his designee for the United States and the Minister of Interior or his designee for Thailand. The article also provides that requests for assistance shall be made directly from one Central Authority to the other.

The first paragraph of Article 4 provides that requests shall be submitted in writing in the language of the Requested State. The second paragraph provides that requests shall contain the information required by the Requested state to execute the request, including but not limited to the subject matter and the nature of the investigation or proceeding to which the request relates, a description of the evidence, information or other assistance sought, and the purpose for which it is sought. The third paragraph outlines information that should be provided "when appropriate."

Article 5 obligates each party to execute requests promptly and, to the extent not prohibited by its law, in accordance with the directions of the Requesting State. It also provides that the courts of the Requested State shall have authority to issue all orders necessary to execute a request.

Article 6 provides that the Requested State shall pay all ordinary costs relating to the execution of the request, except for the lawful fees of expert witnesses and the travel and incidental expenses of witnesses travelling between the two States.

Article 7 prohibits the disclosure or use of any information or evidence obtained under the Treaty for purposes other than those stated in the request without the consent of the Requested State. Moreover, the article authorizes the Requested State to require that information or evidence furnished to the Requesting State be kept confidential in accordance with conditions which it may specify, provided that the conditions do not interfere with the use of the evidence in a public trial. In addition, the article permits the Requesting State to request that the application for assistance and the granting of assistance be kept confidential if possible.

Article 8 provides that if compulsory (sic) process is necessary the Requested State may complete the taking of testimony or production of documents for the Requesting State by means available under the Requested State's laws.

Article 9 provides that the Requested State shall provide copies of its publicly available government records if such records are requested under the Treaty. In addition, the Requested State may, in its discretion, provide any record or information not publicly available to the same extent that such records or information would be made available to its own law enforcement and judicial authorities.

Article 10 obligates the Requested State to serve any legal documents transmitted by the Central Authority of the Requesting State a response or appearance in the Requesting State within a reasonable time before the scheduled response or appearance. No person other than a national of the Requesting State can be subjected to any legal sanction for failing to comply with a document that is served pursuant to this article and calls for his appearance in the Requesting State.

Article 11 provides that a request for the search, seizure and delivery of any article shall be carried out if the Requesting State provides sufficient evidence for such action under the laws of the Requested State. In the United States, a Thai request would have to be supported by a showing that probable cause for the search exists, and in Thailand a request by the United States would have to comply with the corresponding Thai evidentiary standard.

Article 12 authorizes the transfer of a person in custody in either State to the other for purposes of providing testimony, subject to the consent of the person and the relevant Party. Authority is also provided to keep such a person in custody unless release is authorized by the sending State. The receiving State is required to send the person back as soon as circumstances permit and is not permitted to condition the person's return on an extradition request by the sending State.

Article 13 requires the Requested State to take "all necessary measures" to locate or identify witnesses, potential defendants, experts, and other persons who are believed to be in its territory and are needed in connection with an investigation, prosecution or proceeding in the Requesting State.

Article 14 provides that one State may request the other to initiate criminal proceedings in certain circumstances.

Article 15 stipulates that a State may notify the other of fruits or instrumentalities of a criminal offense believed to be in the other State. The Parties may, to the extent permitted by their respective laws and this Treaty, assist one another in proceedings regarding forfeiture. "Fruits and instrumentalities" include money, vessels and other property used in perpetrating the crime or acquired as a result of the crime.

This provision expressly authorizes assistance in the execution of penal laws, an area in which countries do not necessarily otherwise assist each other. It is also consistent with a recently enacted U.S. statute, 18 U.S.C. 981(i), which permits equitable sharing of forfeited property with a foreign government pursuant to a treaty in order to reflect that government's contribution in narcotics investigations leading to seizure or forfeiture.

Article 16 provides that if a person in the Requested State is needed to appear in the Requesting State, the Requested State shall upon request invite the person to appear in the Requesting State. The Requesting State is required to pay the expenses of such voluntary appearance in accordance with Article 6.

Article 17 ensures a degree of "safe conduct" for a witness who voluntarily appears in the Requesting State pursuant to Article 16. "Safe conduct" encompasses limited immunity from prosecution, service of civil process, detention or any restriction of personal liberty with regard to acts or convictions that preceded the witness' departure from the Requested State while the witness is present in the Requesting State and for up to fifteen days after notification that his presence in the Requesting State is no longer required.

Article 18 provides that any documents, records or articles of evidence furnished under the Treaty must be returned to the Requested State as soon as possible unless that State waives their return.

Article 19 provides that the Treaty does not preclude whether Party from utilizing other international agreements that may offer means of securing assistance or cooperating, such as Interpol, or from using its own internal laws on legal assistance.

Article 20 sets forth standard procedures for ratification and entry into force of the Treaty.

Article 21 provides that either Party may terminate the Treaty by written notice. Termination takes effect six months after such notification.

The United States Delegation consisting of representatives of the Departments of State and Justice, has also prepared a Technical Section-by-Section Analysis of the Treaty. That Analysis will be transmitted separately to the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

The Department of State joins the Department of Justice in favoring approval of this Treaty by the Senate at an early date.

Respectfully submitted,

George P. Shultz.
